A highway memorial for two fallen police officers

Honored. Charles O'Hanlon and Brian Lorenzo will be attached to the same strip of I-95 forever.

A 12-mile stretch of I-95 between locations where two Philadelphia police officers were killed in separate incidents nearly 30 years apart has been renamed in honor of both of them.

Officers O'Hanlon and Lorenzo Memorial Highway runs from Allegheny Avenue (mile marker 23) to Academy Road (mile marker 35).

Philadelphia Highway Patrol Officer Charles P. O'Hanlon was killed in November 1985 when a tractor-trailer crashed into the rear of his unmarked patrol vehicle. He was 40.

Brian Lorenzo, also a highway patrol officer, died in 2012 when a drunken driver collided head-on with his motorcycle. He was 48.

"It shows that the people who live here don't forget," said John McNesby, president of the Fraternal Order of Police Lodge No. 5.

McNesby, Mayor Michael Nutter, state officials and family members of the deceased gathered yesterday to dedicate the memorial signs, which can be found on the northbound and southbound sides of the highway.

Brian Lorenzo 1964-2012

Philadelphia Highway Patrol Officer Brian Lorenzo was killed on July 8, 2012, when a drunken driver collided head-on with Lorenzo's department-issued motorcycle on I-95 near the Cottman Avenue exit. He was 48.

The driver was headed the wrong way at the time of the accident. The driver was arrested at the scene and later charged with third-degree murder.

Lorenzo had served 23 years in the Philadelphia Police Department.

O'Hanlon 1945-1985

Philadelphia Highway Patrol Officer Charles O'Hanlon, a 19-year veteran, was struck and killed by a tractor trailer carrying hazardous chemicals on Nov. 13, 1985.

- The truck rammed a van he had stopped for a traffic violation on I-95 in the Northeast. He was 40.

- He is survived by his wife and four sons. All four sons became Philadelphia cops.

The city received approval to rename the section from the state's General Assembly. Final approval came from Gov. Tom Corbett last October.

McNesby said a bronze plaque, which typically commemorates fallen officers, will be planted in the Northeast and dedicated for Lorenzo in September. O'Hanlon's plaque, also set in the Northeast, was placed in 2005.

"It's a great tribute to keep the memory of our officers alive," he said.

Police: Alleged
drunken driver
hits cop car

Delaware State Police early Tuesday charged a Cheswold man with DUI after he allegedly blew a stop sign and crashed into a patrol car west of Dover.

Investigators said a 27-year-old state trooper was driving west on Forrest Avenue near Rose Valley School Road around 2:30 a.m. when Alex Weal, 28, failed to stop at a posted stop sign and drove into the intersection.

Weal allegedly struck the rear driver's side of the 2010 Crown Victoria patrol car, causing it to spin, then came to a stop in a ditch.

The trooper, who police said was wearing a seat belt, was treated and released for minor injuries.

Weal, who was not injured, was charged with second-degree vehicular assault, driving under the influence of alcohol, failure to have insurance in his possession and failure to stop at a stop sign. METRO

Up in flames. Pastor sets fire to car, tries to collect insurance: DA

A 57-year-old North Philadelphia pastor has been hit with a slew of charges after he admitted to filing an insurance claim for his car that he destroyed in a fire a day earlier, the district attorney's office said.

Teofilo Santiago, a Pentecostal church pastor, has been charged with arson, insurance fraud, attempted theft by deception, conspiracy and causing or risking a catastrophe.

In March, Santiago's 2004 Nissan Quest was found on fire on the 2700 block of Emerald Street. The next day, Santiago called Nationwide Insurance and reported his vehicle had been stolen and destroyed. He had reported his Nissan was in good condition.

It was found the fire started in the passenger's compartment. A forensic examination showed no forceful entry and the correct key was used for entry.

The damage to the car far exceeded the value.

Other facts

Santiago told police he didn't know the car was missing.

- The insurance company found that Santiago's car was valued at $7,547.
- Santiago later admitted his car was in poor condition and needed many repairs.

It was found Santiago owned a $4,700 lien on the vehicle.

In April, insurance investigators contacted police for the suspected fraudulent claim. Santiago maintained his car was in perfect condition. After Santiago saw the forensic results, he rescinded his claim and admitted he conspired with another individual to destroy his car, report it as stolen and collect the insurance settlement.

Santiago was arrested yesterday. METRO

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING AND PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD
PHILADELPHIA HOUSING AUTHORITY

The Philadelphia Housing Authority (PHA) is a participant in the Moving to Work Demonstration Program (MTW). PHA was initially selected to participate in the MTW Program in 2001. In October 2008, PHA entered into an Amended and Restated Moving to Work Agreement ("MTW Agreement") with the US Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD"), which has subsequently been further amended.

The MTW Agreement defines the terms and conditions under which PHA is a participant in the MTW Program. The MTW Agreement requires that PHA submit an MTW Annual Plan for HUD review and approval. PHA's current MTW Annual Plan for MTW Year Thirteen (PHA Fiscal Year 2014) was approved by HUD on May 30, 2013.

PHA is seeking public review and comments on two proposed actions relative to the MTW Program:

- Amendment to the MTW Agreement – The proposed amendment to the MTW Agreement will provide PHA with additional flexibility in utilizing Replacement Housing Factor funds received by PHA from HUD.
- Amendment to the MTW Year Thirteen Annual Plan – The proposed amendment to the MTW Annual Plan will: 1) Establish that PHA may apply to convert one or more public housing sites under the Rental Assistance Demonstration Program and that PHA may utilize MTW Block Grant funds to support the conversion; and, 2) Allow PHA to establish a flexible subsidy program for newly developed or acquired public housing units, subject to HUD review and approval of each transaction.

Additional information regarding the proposed amendments is available from PHA. Copies are available for public review on PHA's website at: www.pha.phila.gov under the "Latest News" section or may be picked up at the following locations:

Group shining light on ongoing crime in Camden

Hope. A nonprofit is hoping to fight crime in Camden by restoring power to broken streetlights.

A nonprofit based in Camden, the New Jersey city which year after year has won the dubious recognition of being America's poorest and most dangerous locale, is attempting to shine light on the city's crime problem — both literally and figuratively.

Local high school students volunteering with Hopeworks' 'N Camden' "Turn the Lights Back on in Camden" mission spent the summer gathering community feedback and mapping the city's more than 400 streetlights and decorative lights, at least 77 of which have gone dark.

"I think a big problem is a lot of people either shoot out the streetlights or intentionally defect the wiring in streetlights to keep the neighborhood dark so crimes can happen without anyone seeing," said Danyelle Austin, director of academic success for Hopeworks.

Shamir Lyons, 17, who works with Hopeworks' social media team, said he felt proud to use his summer break to make his neighborhood safer. "I never realized that people in their own communities were actually scared to be outside at night — I thought they were used to it," he said. "I learned new things about how in a community, every change makes a difference."

Maryann Vega, 16, who worked this summer on Hopeworks' GIS mapping team, said now that data has been gathered, the group will petition Public Service Electric and Gas Co. to restore power to the broken lights. "We're having a meeting during the next couple of weeks with the manager of PSE&G," she said. "Once we collected all the information on which lights were working and which lights weren't, we made it into a little booklet we can bring to show him."

Raising awareness

Teaming up with Night Out

Austin said she hoped the group's participation in National Night Out yesterday would forge lasting partnerships.

"One of the reasons we really wanted to bring everybody together in the community around National Night Out is so we can get some key people involved in a conversation about streetlights," she said yesterday.

"Our social media team has done a lot of work around talking to the community about how they feel about streetlights being broken and talking about safety. We're expecting the mayor to join us, and we're hoping to start a conversation with her and really make the lights a collaborative effort with Hopeworks' youth, PSE&G and the mayor."

Vehicle strikeDrone strike kills four suspected al Qaeda militants

At least four suspected al Qaeda members were killed in a drone strike in central Yemen, local tribal leaders said yesterday, following a U.S. warning of a possible major militant attack in the region.

The Yemeni tribal leaders said five missiles struck a vehicle traveling in Maarib Province in yesterday's strike, killing all of its occupants.

State news agency Saba also said initial reports indicated that four suspected al Qaeda militants were killed in the air strike in Maarib.

Drone strikes on suspected al Qaeda targets in Yemen are usually carried out by U.S. forces, although Washington does not comment publicly on the practice.

George W. Bush gets stent for blocked artery

Bush left office in January 2009. / GETTY IMAGES

Fit to lead. Bush was known as a fitness enthusiast during his two terms in the White House.

Former U.S. president George W. Bush underwent successful surgery at a Dallas hospital yesterday to place a stent in a blocked heart artery.

Doctors discovered the blockage on Monday during Bush's annual physical at the Cooper Clinic in Dallas, according to a statement from spokesman Freddy Ford. They recommended a stent to open the blockage, and Bush, 67, underwent surgery yesterday morning at Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital, the statement said.

Bush was "in high spirits, eager to return home tomorrow and resume his normal schedule tomorrow," Ford said.

Since leaving the White House, Bush has participated three times in the 62-mile Warrior 100K bike ride along with 20 wounded military veterans.

As president, Bush introduced the Adult Fitness Challenge and the Presidential Active Lifestyle Award. The website askthetrainer.com named him the most physically fit president in U.S. history.

Typically, the procedure Bush had involves inserting a narrow, balloon-tipped tube called a catheter through a puncture in the arm or thigh and snaking it through the vascular system and into the heart.

Newer stents are usually infused with medicine that prevents scar tissue from forming and re-blocking the artery.

Leak case. Judge cuts potential sentence for WikiLeaks soldier

A U.S. military judge reduced potential prison time for Pfc. Bradley Manning to 90 years from 136 years yesterday by ruling that some sentences for leaking secret files to WikiLeaks should be merged.

Court-martial Judge Col. Denise Lind convicted Manning last week on 19 criminal counts, including espionage and theft, for providing more than 700,000 secret files to WikiLeaks in the largest unauthorized release of secret data in U.S. history.

Lind ruled that some counts resulted from the same offenses and should be merged to avoid "an unreasonable multiplication of charges." REUTERS

Nielsen study links Twitter chatter with TV ratings

A frenzy of Twitter chatter about a program generally means more viewers are tuning in, while more popular shows generate more Twitter activity, a study by Nielsen has found.

The firm says that for the first time it has proved with statistical rigor what many in the media business have suspected in recent years: A show's ratings and the magnitude of its Twitter buzz are correlated.

The findings will be announced by Nielsen as it prepares to unveil a new ratings system tied to Twitter.

Nielsen and Twitter are set to begin publishing a new "Nielsen Twitter TV Rating" that measures the volume of Twitter chatter about programs.

Python kills two Canadian boys in bed as they slept

Deadly. According to the National Post, African rock pythons are known to kill humans.

Autopsies were scheduled today for two boys in New Brunswick, Canada, who were found strangled to death by a snake that escaped from an exotic pet store located beneath the apartment where they were sleeping.

According to police, the snake, an African rock python, escaped its cage at the Reptile Ocean store and got into the building's ventilation system. It then made its way to the upstairs apartment, where the young boys were having a slumber party with the son of the store's owner, Jean-Claude Savoie.

The boys, Connor and Noah Barthe, were brothers ages 5 and 7 years old.

Savoie found the boys strangled when he went to check on them Monday morning, he told Global News.

"My body is in shock. I don't know what to think," he said.

According to a statement by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the snake has been captured and is in police possession.

"It's very rare that pythons kill humans, but not unheard of. It occasionally happens if the circumstances are just right. Oftentimes, it's just kind of a perfect storm where you get a big hungry snake in close proximity to humans," Ian Recchio, curator of reptiles and amphibians at the Los Angeles Zoo told National Geographic.

Usher's son in hospital

Sad news today from Atlanta: Usher's son with ex-wife Tameka Raymond, Usher Raymond V, is in the ICU due to almost drowning in the singer's pool.

According to TMZ, the 5-year-old dove into the family pool to fish a toy caught in the drain, catching his hand and trapping him. His aunt immediately dove in but couldn't pull him out. A maid also tried to free the child. Finally, two men working on the house were able to pull him loose. Usher, who was not home at the time of the accident, was able to return home in time to ride in the ambulance with his son.

This is the last thing the Raymond family needs. Tameka's son from a previous relationship, Kile, died last year from jet-ski accident.

Talking point

Depp on 'The Lone Ranger' flop

Johnny Depp has a theory of his own as to why "The Lone Ranger" fizzled at the box office: It's the critics' fault. "I think the reviews were written seven to eight months before we released the film," Depp tells Variety. "I think the reviews were written when they heard [director] Gore [Verbinski] and [producer] Jerry [Bruckheimer] and me were going to do 'The Lone Ranger.' They had expectations that it must be a blockbuster. I didn't have any expectations of that. I never do."

Oprah: 'No one is going to call me the "N-word"'

File this under "no s—": Oprah Winfrey says no one is going to call her the N-word.

The entertainment mogul spoke to "Entertainment Tonight" about the controversy that enveloped Paula Deen. "In time she will be fine. For me, it all just felt kind of sad."

And then Winfrey spoke the truth: "Nobody in their right mind is going to call me the N-word." No kidding! Can you even imagine the fiery death of that person?!

Al Roker actually overslept

After 39 years, it was bound to happen — Al Roker overslept on Tuesday morning, missing his 6 a.m. early morning show, "Wake Up With Al," on The Weather Channel.

"After 39 years, it happened," tweeted Roker, 58. "I overslept and missed a show." He did, however, make it to "Today." The morning show's host, Matt Lauer, had this quip: "I tweeted out Rip Van

Here's a nice dose of adorable for your Wednesday morning. Shane Willmott of Australia is training mice to skateboard. According to Metro UK, Willmott begins training his four-legged friends "before their eyes even open," by pulling them around on tiny skateboards. He eventually upgrades them to ramps and even fire-ringed hoops. Serious question, though: Shouldn't they be wearing adorable, mouse-sized helmets? / NEWSPIX VIA GETTY IMAGES

Once upon a time, Cinderella was a small puppet

String. Old tales get new life at Puppet Festival (r)Evolution.

Seth Shaffer fell in love the second he met Baby William. On the outside, Willy was sleek, simple and symmetrical, but inside was a complex web of wires and soldered joints. He was unlike any other puppet Shaffer had ever encountered.

The University of Connecticut MFA student pleaded with his professors for access to more of Dick Myers' iconic characters like Baby William. He didn't have to go far. The Dick Myers Archive has been housed at UConn since the puppeteer's death in 2005.

With mountains of original notes, recordings and puppets, Shaffer set out to recreate some of the master's original productions. On Friday he will perform Myers' version of "Cinderella" as part of Puppet Festival (r)Evolution, the national festival of the Puppeteers of America, at Swarthmore College this week.

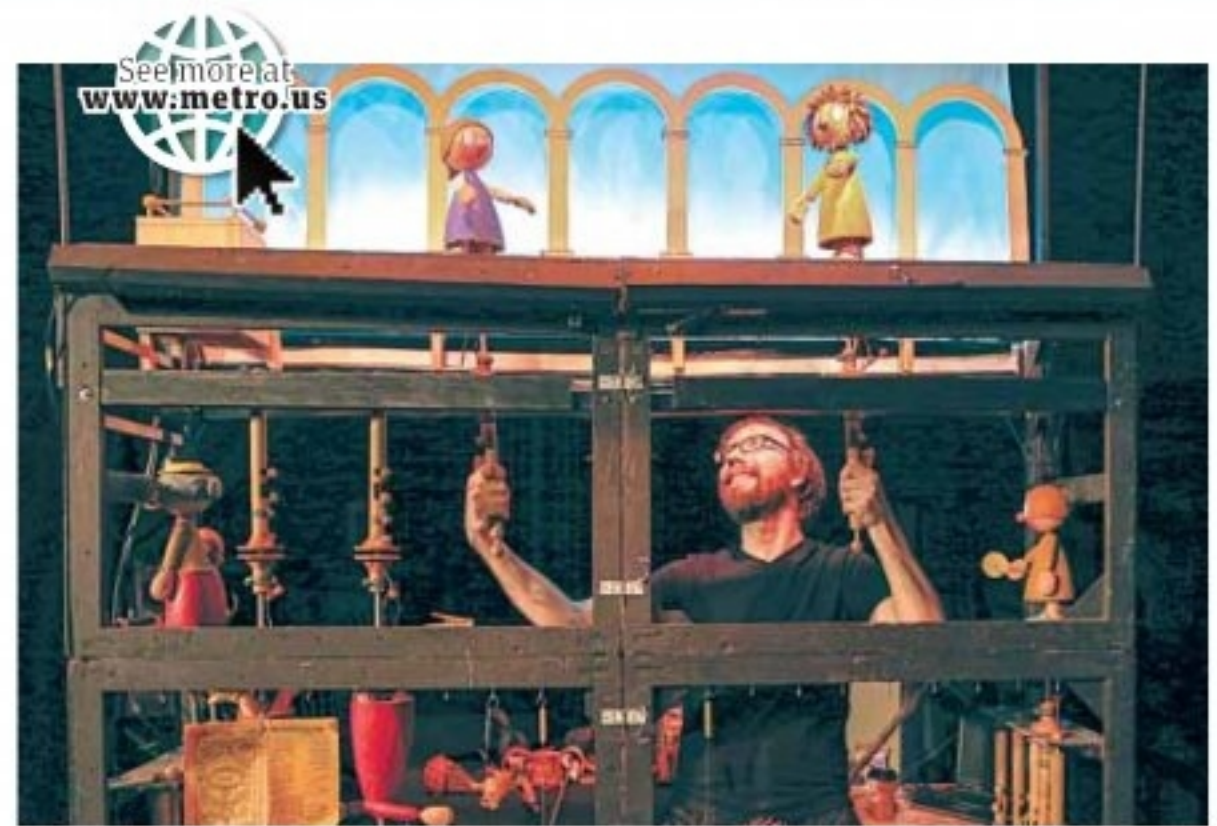

"He did everything himself — the puppets, sound, lights, scene changes. Everything! So that's the way I have to do it, too," says Shaffer, from the UConn campus. "It's taken months to piece together how he pulled this off. Dick really didn't like people touching his equipment. So I'm the only other person in the world that has performed a Dick Myers show."

Myers created his stable of characters in the mid-'60s, from his Waterford, Conn., home. Always more appreciated overseas, in 1983 he stopped touring, and there are no surviving recordings of his performances.

"Dick was a bit of a recluse, that's for sure. I think he always felt like an underdog, and every one of his characters has a bit of that in them. Cinderella grows up in poverty, but eventually goes to the ball," says Shaffer. "Dick was somebody that didn't have a whole lot in the world, but he loved when people helped him to become what he always wanted to be."

Jason Sudeikis gets a manly ear tickle from Nick Offerman in "We're the Millers." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Nick Offerman helps save the day (again)

Weed comedy. "We're the Millers" is a Farrelly Brothers comedy for a post-Farrelly Brothers world.

poisonous spider bite enlarges the testicles of the nice guy virgin "son" ("Son of Rambow"'s ace Will Poulter). But even these sequences have a pleasing form, thanks to the performers and director Rawson Marshall Thurber, who, as in "Dodgeball," doesn't know how to make a comedy pretty but does know how to pace jokes, gags and sequences. (A game of Pictionary gone awry smartly withholds one major element for a decent punch line.)

This is a retro Farrelly Brothers clone, right down to the eventual appearance of "heart." (Spoiler: Our bickering heroes learn to be a make-shift family.) But now that not even the Farrelly Brothers are making Farrelly Brothers movies, one that gets the job done — with a winningly pissy turn from the talented but often wasted Sudeikis — is worthy of a glove clap.

MATT PRIGGE

Marijuana slows down the reflexes, which is why it's rarely ideal for a genre as visceral as comedy. "We're the Millers" is likely the highest profile "weed comedy" ever made, but like "The Big Lebowski" and "Smiley Face," it knows that weed in itself isn't funny. No character even gets high, although the setup is very nearly the same as Cheech and Chong's "Up in Smoke."

Jason Sudeikis plays an aging, low-rent drug dealer forced to smuggle rather a significant amount of herb across the border. To better throw "the man" off his scent, he gets a bland haircut, switches to a sunnier mien and rounds up some local lowlifes — including a surly stripper (Jennifer Aniston) and a street kid (Emma Roberts) — to pose as a Winnebago-wielding suburban family. Getting the haul out of Mexico proves easy, but they run afoul of both an angry cartel and, perhaps more burdensome, an actual Winnebago-wielding suburban family, populated by Nick Offerman and Kathryn Hahn.

The script for "We're the Millers" has been in development hell since the mid-aughts, which is probably why it actually has a shape, as well as a parade of old-fashioned gross-out gags. Scenes where these pros are just riffing are preferable to set pieces where, say, a

No mercy for Percy

YA romp. "Percy Jackson," the "Harry Potter" ripoff series, loses fun and Pierce Brosnan's centaur.

Modern lit for anyone under 18 rips off either "Harry Potter" or "Twilight." Rick Riordan's "Percy Jackson" series, which steals from the former, at least has a potentially fun idea: Its boring, blank-slate hero gets to hang with the stars of Greek mythology.

The first film adaptation, from 2010, surrounded star Logan Lerman with a mile-long who's-who of affordable names, from Uma Thurman as Medusa to Pierce Brosnan as a centaur out of a romance novel cover.

A half-horse Brosnan is one of the things tragically missing from "Percy Jackson: Sea of Monsters."

Nearly all of the former supporting cast, along with their storied characters, are missing. (Anthony Stewart Head fills in for Brosnan, and even he's AWOL for most of the running time.) There's not even a sea of monsters — just one, singular beast, visible only as a circle of pointy teeth. All that's left are emo teens with self-esteem issues.

This round finds Lerman's Percy trying to find the fabled Golden Fleece to save a dying tree, as well as his threatened home at Camp Half-

Blood. (That's not the only borderline litigious crib from "Harry Potter.")

Again, this sounds like fun: Who wouldn't like a modern rehash of "Jason and the Argonauts"?

That question remains after "Sea of Monsters," which does too little playing with established mythical stories, instead offering a steady stream of uninspired set pieces alternating with thumb-twiddling teen-aged character development. Percy gets a brother this time in Tyson (Douglas Smith), a lovable lug of a cyclops who teaches everybody a groaning lesson in tolerance.

As he was in "The Perks of Being a Wallflower," Lerman is monotonously nice. Moreover, having already achieved a massive victory in installment one (crows a friend,

"He saved Olympus. What have you ever done?"), he simply gets to realize it again, just to make sure. The first offered adult distractions from young Percy and pals. All you get here are sassy snakes and a rampaging robot bull — which is not as neat as it sounds.

Postgreen Homes pops it like it's hot

Cladding. The developer's new Pop Project uses an unusual material.

Philly developer Postgreen Homes takes sustainable, eco-friendly housing seriously. They build affordable homes, mainly in East and South Kensington, that meet Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design and Energy Star standards. The company is, in a word, green. Very green. We're talking homes with storm water collection, solar thermal power and dual-flush toilets.

Postgreen's newest design will bring a celebratory feel to Blair Street.

"Wait, I should make sure I say this right," says Chad Ludeman as he sticks a finger in his mouth, presses it against his cheek and snaps it out. "Pop! It's our Pop Project," he explains, trying to imitate the sound of a bottle of bubbly being cracked open. Ludeman is the president of Postgreen Homes, and he's excited about the company's latest endeavor. "Basically, it's two single-family homes on Blair Street in East Kensington," he says. Sounds simple enough. The twist? High-density expanded cork will be used as both exterior cladding and insulation on the upper levels of the homes.

"Cork's being used a lot on commercial buildings in Europe, [and that] gave us the confidence to work with it," says Ludeman.

According to Ludeman, the Pop homes will be the first in the U.S. to use expanded cork as cladding and insulation. "There is one company that's doing it too, and they're racing us. But they're a few weeks behind us," he says.

Pop Project homes are being designed with cork insulation. / ORANGE CONCEPT, POSTGREEN HOMES

"We're trying to insulate the home as best as possible. Expanded cork is a dual-use, low-embodied product. And it's renewable. It's natural and it'll be interesting to see how it changes, like patina, over time."

And aside from expanded cork's ability to insulate a home and protect the exterior, Ludeman understands that it's also just cool. "It's dynamic and interesting," he says. We'll drink to that.

Cork!

No need to save some for the wine

Ludeman isn't convinced cork cladding is going to catch on. "We might see a couple more pop up, but the material isn't readily available," he explains. But that doesn't mean that there's a cork shortage; it just means a lack of U.S. distributors. According to Cork Forest Conservation Alliance, "there is enough cork to close all wine bottles for the next 100 years."

Club Monaco launches shoes

Shopping. The brand's debut includes leopard-print sandals and shiny slippers.

Club Monaco, our go-to for sophisticated pieces that look polished and cool at the workplace and beyond, just dipped its toes into footwear. On Monday, the brand launched a collection of shoes online that are handmade in Italy and range in price from $198.50 to $395.

"The strongest part is the quality," says Caroline Belhumeur, senior vice president of women's design. "The collection is distinguished by both the superior materials and craftsmanship."

Also high on Belhumeur's requirements: timeless designs.

Luxe materials including calf hair and python were used to create staples such as perfect-for-the-office pumps and pointy-toe flats.

"The best trend is a shoe that is classic," says Belhumeur. "Just like our apparel line, our shoes can work this season and still be worn seasons from now."

Well-heeled

What was the inspiration for the shoe collection?

Consumers have a mild shoe obsession — and our customer has always asked us if they could buy the shoes we used in our lookbook and campaigns, so we figured why not make our own collection. We had a clear idea on the type of shapes we wanted and how they should fit — clean, timeless, chic shapes where we play with texture and color.

What styles do you think will be the most popular, and why?

The April pump was a strong aspect of the collection; it's a classic with a timeless shape. This shoe style can make skinny pants and skirts look fresh. I also love the Casey sandal. You can pair it with fuller skirts, and the style allows you to play with pattern and texture without overdoing the look.

Banana Republic collaborates with Issa London

Banana Republic is on a roll with the designer collaborations lately. First there was the summertime Hamptons-inspired collection with Milly, followed by the announcement for their exciting upcoming holiday capsule with luxury designer L'Wren Scott.

And now the retailer has joined forces with Kate Middleton fave, Issa London — you might remember the Duchess of Cambridge famously wore a navy silk wrap dress by the ladylike brand when she and William announced their engagement in 2010.

You can now find that identical dress in the new 40-piece capsule debuting in stores and online Thursday. But unlike the one Kate wore, which retailed for $575, the Banana Republic version will cost $130. The collection ranges in price from $69.50 to $150. Accessories range from $39.50 to $150.

Look like Kate for less — this collection is going to be a royal retail hit. TC

LAWRENCE BONK

LAWRENCE.BONK@METRO.US

Video games have a bad rap of being a lonely activity usually conducted in the basement of a parent's house. This is not entirely true. Sometimes that basement has other people in it! Here are reviews of recent titles that feature neat multiplayer components.

'Dragon's Crown'

System: PS3/Vita
Maker: Atlus

Remember standing in arcades as a kid and pumping quarters into multiplayer fighting games like "Double Dragon" and "Golden Axe?" Wouldn't it be cool if someone took that basic "fight anything that moves" premise and added in a host of RPG mechanics, complete with stats, hundreds of items and secret areas? Well, now that exists!

"Dragon's Crown," which can be played on PS3 or Vita, is an absolute corker of a sidescrolling brawler. There are tons of classes to choose from, and so many weapons and spells that it'll make your medieval head spin. This game is absolutely meant to be played with friends, however. The levels and bosses are absolutely brutal to take on by yourself.

'Pikmin 3'

System: Wii U
Maker: Nintendo
4 globes

It's been a long time since gamers got to play a new iteration of Nintendo's real-time strategy/exploration/apocalyptic garden simulation known as "Pikmin." To newbies, the series has you controlling a fleet of tiny creatures as they collect fruit, attack monsters and occasionally commit suicide. You know — good wholesome fun. This new version streamlines the entire process and brings it to glorious HD to make it the current stand-out title on the Wii U.

Not only does "Pikmin 3" feature an alarmingly addictive competitive multiplayer mode based on Bingo (really), but there are also a host of two player co-op missions. It cannot be overstated how fun it is to plan a detailed route of attack with a friend. Having to talk in real life to play a video game? Unheard of!

Google adds touch controls to Chrome browser test build

Google is reportedly experimenting with touch-friendly features for its popular Chrome browser.

The Verge reported that Google's latest Canary build includes a slide-to-navigate feature for swiping between Web pages. Chrome Canary is an experimental version of Google's Web browser that the tech giant says is designed for developers and early adopters.

With this addition, Google could also be positioning itself to better support its own devices: Google's Chromebook Pixel laptop has "touch-enabled glass" with pinch-to-zoom, tap and swipe capabilities.

Although summer is flying by, there's still plenty of time to indulge in some of the season's most delicious superfoods. These edible powerhouses are packed with vitamins, minerals and disease-fighting antioxidants to keep you feeling on the top of your game. Take full advantage of these tasty picks and reap the benefits throughout the rest of the summer.

Melons

What's summer without some sweet, juicy melon? Thanks to the high water content of watermelon, cantaloupe and honeydew, these sweet-as-candy produce picks help to fill you up — without filling you out. Cut them up into cubes or get fancy with a melon-baller and serve as a refreshing fruit salad along with breakfast. I like to stick them on skewers along with grapes and freeze — these "frozen melon kabobs" are a big hit at parties!

Summer squash

Unlike winter varieties, summer squash is low in carbs and calories — making it a terrific veggie to pile on your plate during the hot summer months. Zucchini and yellow squash are the most common types, and both are excellent sources of vitamin C, lutein and

Blueberries

They may be little in stature, but blueberries are big on disease-fighting antioxidants and have plenty of research to back up their brain-boosting capabilities. Use this versatile fruit in a yogurt parfait, mix into whole-grain pancake batter, toss into a salad or simply pop in your mouth one after the other.

fiber in each pear-shaped package. Talk about win-win!

Swiss chard

This potent, dark, leafy green reaches its peak in the summer, and it contains a substantial amount of magnesium and potassium — minerals essential to managing blood pressure and preventing osteoporosis. Similar in taste to spinach, low in calories and high in nutrients, Swiss chard is a great option to help round out your next meal. Try it in a summer salad, tucked in a sandwich wrap or simply sauteed.

SUMMER PRODUCE SUPERSTARS

zeaxanthin — antioxidants responsible for keeping eyesight sharp and immune systems strong. Throw them on the grill with some garlic and olive oil for an easy side dish, or chop them into a pasta salad for added crunch.

Peaches

Succulent and sweet, this fuzzy stone fruit is loaded with bloat-fighting potassium, skin-enhancing vitamin C and weight-controlling fiber — three nutrients that help you feel your best on the beach. Though eating a delicious peach straight from the fruit bowl is plenty tasty, try grilling peaches to take the flavor to a whole new level. Add some vanilla fro-yo and you have an indulgent dessert.

Avocado

One of my favorite ways to enjoy this nutrient-rich superfruit (yes, it's technically a fruit) is sliced, drizzled with lime juice, and sprinkled with a touch of coarse sea salt. You can even use avocado in place of mayonnaise in tuna salads, as a topping for turkey burgers or simply in a refreshing summer salad. And although avocado is best known for its huge load of heart-healthy monounsaturated fat, it also gets kudos for packing an amazing 14 grams of

Tasty summer cocktails without any of the guilt

Drinks. Find out how to make a waist-friendly thirst quencher.

A night on a bar stool can mean the undoing of your diet, not to mention a way to let unhealthy sugar into your body. (Or too much alcohol, for that matter.)

Pamela Wiznitzer, mixologist at NYC's buzzy Dead Rabbit Cocktail Lounge, is also the resident expert mixologist for Weight Watchers. Wiznitzer creates lightened-up versions of tasty drinks for the brand's point system.

"You don't need a million things for a good drink," she says. "You need two or three that are the most fresh and flavorsome."

Many liquors, like vodka or gin, contain about 70 calories per fluid ounce. But extra additions like sugar and cream come with calories. Wiznitzer favors zero-calorie sweeteners like Truvia and Nectresse, coconut milk instead of cream in pina colodas, and fresh Caloriecount.com estimates that a pina coloda clocks in at 526 cal. Visit www.metro.us for more light cocktail ideas. / PHOTO: DISC fruit juices instead of mixes, which are often loaded with sugar.

Summer is also a great time to mix up a cocktail incorporating vibrant ingredients of the season, Wiznitzer says.

"You can get creative with fresh ingredients from the farmers market," says Wiznitzer. "There's so much fresh produce."

To enjoy your cocktail without going overboard, slow down your pace, Wiznitzer says.

"In hot weather, there's the tendency to suck it down, but take a minute to enjoy each sip," she instructs. "Order a glass of water before you've finished the cocktail. ... It slows you down and you might think, 'Do I need another cocktail?'"

LINDA CLARKE

Wiznitzer created a slew of cocktails for the Weight Watchers PointsPlus system, like this one:

Tropical Breeze – WW PointsPlus value: 3

1.5 oz. Malibu Island Spiced Rum
1 oz. Orange-flavored Vita Coco Coconut Water
1 oz. pineapple juice
1 tsp. sugar-free orange marmalade

Like a dairy-free pina coloda, this drink will satisfy your sweet tooth without undoing your day. Shake all ingredients together in a shaker and strain over ice in a lowball glass. Garnish with a stick of pineapple and orange slice.

What won't help your odds of conceiving?

Location of study: New Zealand

Study subjects: 3,548 women attending fertility clinics

Results: Taking antioxidants does not increase a woman's chances of conceiving a baby, according to a study from the University of Auckland and published in The Cochrane Library.

Significance: Fertility treatment for women often includes dietary supplements such as antioxidants.

Bacteria is good for mental health

Location of study: France

Study subjects: Mice

Results: It seems that intestinal bacteria is not just good for keeping the digestive system healthy, but the human microbiome — that is, a variety of symbiotic bacteria and viruses that coexist within our bodies — aids mental health too. These new findings were published online at the National Institutes of Health website. According to researchers, probiotic supplements can potentially restore the natural gut microbiome and reduce aggression, anxiety, depression and other mild psychiatric symptoms.

Significance: An imbalance of intestinal flora disrupts the immune system. One school of thought is that depletion of the flora then promotes what is known as "auto-intoxication," which in turn contributes to mental illness.

Be extremely careful as to how you delegate. If you select the wrong person, you could end up with a big mess.

Don't let yourself get drawn into a disagreement between two friends. Regardless of which pal you side up with, your involvement will only cause more trouble.

Just because things are going smoothly at present, don't be indifferent to an important matter.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.
It's always smart to be extra careful about what you put in writing and to keep close track of the details of past agreements. Tread carefully.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21.
Don't look for much help regarding a financial problem. You'll have to take care of matters.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20.

This might not be a good day to get involved in something that requires total concentration and consistency.

A classic that was just dying for a sequel

Re: 'Where "Romeo and Juliet" ended' (Metro, Aug. 6) I just wanted to thank you guys for putting the "Romeo and Juliet" sequel on the front page yesterday. Everything in that article from the name of the book ("Still Star-Crossed"... was "Romeo's Revenge" already taken?) to the author's indication that she "didn't do as much research as you might think" had me laughing all through my subway ride.

Personally, I've always thought "Romeo and Juliet" ended on a bit of an unfinished note, what with the two main characters dead and everything.

Thank goodness someone FINALLY took the time to finish Shakespeare's most obviously incomplete story line. COMEDY GOLD!

A-Rod's ship is sunk

Alex Rodriguez's big mouth has gotten him in trouble again. He spoke in a negative way toward MLB and Yankees management. I served in the U.S. Navy, and we had a slogan that says, "Loose lips sink ships." This I believe applies to Alex Rodriguez, who suffers from bad choices, along with not knowing when to shut up. His ship has now sailed and is now suspended. What a shame. He had so much he could have given to the game and instead shamed the name of the game. Our youth must be greatly disappointed that another role model has cheated to win fame and fortune. Baseball greats of the past must be looking down from that big diamond in the sky with tears in their eyes saying, "Say it ain't so, A-Rod!"

Cooper returns to Birds' nest, apologizes again

NFL. The Eagles receiver, back at training camp after the fallout from a racial incident, should play Friday.

Riley Cooper jumped up, hauled in a touchdown pass and enjoyed a chest bump from teammate Jason Avant. On a normal day, the play would have been similar to a tree falling in the woods with nobody around. On Cooper's first day back at Eagles training camp, it was worthy of a snapshot.

Cooper returned to practice yesterday, five days after leaving camp to undergo sensitivity training following the release of video showing him using a racial slur. He was one of the best players on the field for Chip Kelly's squad, which participated in a joint practice with New England.

Cooper caught scores from both Mike Vick and Nick Foles. He looked especially impressive in 11-on-11 drills. Afterward, Cooper once again lamented his actions, saying he pulled each teammate aside individually and apologized.

"I told them I don't want you to forgive me because that puts the burden on you. ... I want it all on me," Cooper said, "and I told them that, and I told them I apologize, and they could tell it was from the heart and they know I'm not that type of person, and it feels good to have support from the guys."

Coach Chip Kelly said he hasn't noticed any rift in the locker room, and he doesn't expect one. Teammates appeared to welcome back Cooper.

"I don't see that happening after talking to our players," Kelly said. "I think our players really understand the situation and are working with him to make sure they get a better understanding about the whole situation."

Neither Kelly nor Cooper would say what type of counseling Cooper underwent during his absence — although the receiver dismissed the notion it had to do with abstaining from alcohol. From listening to Cooper speak, it sounded like he went home to hang out with his parents and reflect on his mistake.

"They're extremely,

Cooper was excused from Eagles training camp to get sensitivity training. / GETTY IMAGES extremely disappointed in me, and that's one of the hardest parts with this whole thing," Cooper said of his parents. "That's not how I was raised. I was raised great. They're having a tough time dealing with this, and that's tough for me to cope with."

The Eagles still haven't made a decision about whether Cooper will play in Friday's preseason opener. Looking at Cooper fly around the field, though, it seems likely he will.

"I'm not going to make any predictions,"

Kelly said. "Someone goes down tomorrow or if he were to get hurt tomorrow, so we'll see, but if he continues to practice, he'll play."

Pats bring different kind of NFL swagger

NFL. Tom Brady and Bill Belichick remind everyone why they have been so successful.

It was a surreal scene at the NovaCare Complex.

Tom Brady was throwing darts in the red zone on the Eagles' practice field. And cornerbacks Bradley Fletcher and Cary Williams were reduced to mere spectators as the Super Bowl champion carved up Chip Kelly's revamped secondary.

At one point, Williams boiled over in frustration and started a fight with rookie wide receiver Aaron Dobson after a running play. Both players were removed.

Bill Belichick is in town this week for joint practices with the Birds.

GETTY IMAGES

"We didn't want this to turn into a wrestling match," Eagles coach Chip Kelly said. "Both of our squads knew before it happened. If you're going to get in a skirmish, you're going to sit."

Other than that, yesterday's practice was mostly civil. The two teams sent their top units against each other in both 7-on-7 and 11-on-11 drills. The Patriots got the better in most instances. However, the joint practice seemed to be very beneficial for both sides.

"That will be good for all of us," said Patriots coach Bill Belichick. "Anything to break up the monotony of camp."

Belichick and Kelly have worked together before. The former Oregon coach went to New England prior to last season to help install some of his innovative techniques. Even though Kelly has yet to coach his first NFL game, the respect is mutual.

"I have so much respect for Chip and what he's done," Belichick said. "We've been friends for awhile, and I know he does a great job with this football team and the program that he's run in Oregon."

Brown is back in the Phillies' lineup. / GETTY IMAGES

Phillies. Dom Brown returns to lineup, but prospects staying put Domonic Brown returned to the lineup last night in the series opener against the Cubs. The All-Star outfielder started and batted cleanup.

To make room, Laynce Nix was designated for assignment. Brown leads the club in home runs (24), RBIs (69) and slugging percentage (.531).

Charlie Manuel continued to shift his lineup around. He moved Darin Ruf to right field, put Brown in left and started John Mayberry in center. Cody Asche played third base, while Michael Young stayed at first base with Ryan Howard still out.

The new lineup echoes what Manuel said the other day. The young guys are going to get their at-bats, no matter what the circumstances.

"The day we brought them up, we brought them up for a reason," Manuel said. "We've got to find room to play some of those guys. It doesn't mean Cody or Ruf will play every single day, but they will get the biggest part of the playing time. Domonic Brown is going to be in the lineup, too."

Yes, he is. And the Phils have more games to figure out how it will play out in 2014. METRO
